Performance monitors that measure the kinematics of a golf club and ball, such as those described by U.S. Patent No's. 6,533,674 and 6,500,073, are well ~~[[know]]~~ known in the art. The most sophisticated of these devices utilize digital imaging devices to optically acquire spatial information of the golf clubs and balls. To determine kinematics, at least two time spaced images which contain spatial information must be acquired.
